What 2060

holds for us

- The world seemed a different one 40 years ago, but besides wars, economical and cultural change...
 - Are we, as humans, substantially different?
 - Don't our basic needs and motivations stay the same?
 - Societies may vary in technical ways and in a "macro" outlook things may look way different but when we pick up and read our favourite classic novel or ancient greek philosophy what do we find?

Does this mean CHANGE is not real?

Is this outlook GOOD or BAD?

I would recommend not to distort discussions into the opposite "black-and-white" way of thinking.

Of course change is real, but in which situations?

In what level? How long-lasting is the change provoked by convulse, shattering historical moments?

After plagues, wars, rapid shifts in politics and history we somehow still find our way back to our stubborn, primal ways... I guess what I'm saying is this

An holocaust happened and we didn't learn to stop picking bigots as leaders... but also we are still a ~~world~~ world with rebels that fight for justice and equality.

The Internet came but we still have traditions and prefer human, face-to-face contact

Despite all...
We still love
We still hate.

There will be selfish people,
and giving people.

Really... How different is Socrates and Diogenes from a Punk and anarchist? How different Joan de Arc and Sor Juana In from Malala and Greta Thunberg?

History repeats itself

In 2060 the world
won't be an utopia nor a dystopia ...

Maybe there will be flying cars or clean energy but there will also be bigots... SO WHAT DO WE DO?

What do we have to do in 2020 to live better in 2060

Educate ourselves on politics and choose good leaders

Keep rebelling against injustice.

Don't stop connecting with others and nurturing those relationships, with love and compassion.
The world can't change if we don't affect our immediate circle.

Consume ethically and consciously, educated on the origins and consequences of our consumption from food, to clothes, to media & entertainment.
Stay in touch with our traditions & ethnicity
but also welcome change & evolution.

Nurture good mental health... Can you imagine how much better the world could become if we all had a good relationship with our mind and health?

E-D-U-C-A-T-I-O-N!

Communicate and establish dialog with people from different backgrounds ↳ strengthen empathy.
